The students enthusiastically took part in cleaning the garden area, removing weeds, digging the soil, planting saplings, and watering the plants. The activity not only enhanced the beauty of the departmental surroundings but also encouraged students to develop a sense of responsibility towards nature.

The gardening session was conducted under the guidance of the concerned faculty members, who motivated the students and supervised the work. The cooperation and unity displayed by the students made the programme successful.

Such activities help in building environmental consciousness and strengthen the bond among students through collective effort. The Bhutia Department looks forward to organizing more such initiatives in the future.
